CDS0043 Golland, Paul	The proposed PSTN network (public switched telephone network) leads to a range of service disruption and could place vulnerable individuals and council assets at risk if no operational service is in place.	In practice, this could mean that tower blocks are left with faulty lifts or unsecure entry systems; vulnerable telecare users could be left without help in an emergency, and traffic could come to a standstill. Service disruptions could also result in high costs, with expensive emergency repairs being carried out to retrospectively rectify issues. There is also a trading standards issue of retailing products that will become obsolete without notice. Fixed lines will be unavailable full impact currently unknown and needs to be investigated as will have an impact to vulnerable individuals, council housing, alarm systems and elevators may all stop working. Until we have assessed our services for this impact we cannot tell what the full impact will be.	Golland, Paul Last Review: 27/06/2024 Last Amended : 28/06/2024 12:09:09	5	5	25	5	5	25

ASC0041 Robson, Simon	Council is not able to meet the statutory requirement on DoLs assessments due to the volume of referrals and staffing ratio .	In the period following the Supreme Court's judgement in 2014 that led to a ten-fold increase in the demand for DoLs authorisations there were a number of local authorities that were penalised with significant financial penalties by the courts for delays in their DoLs work. Others have received adverse findings from the Local Government Ombudsman. However, more recently the Courts and the Ombudsman have been more pragmatic, particularly where local authorities have been able to demonstrate they have been taking all reasonable efforts to mitigate the problem . Delays in our DoLs work can create risks to some of the most vulnerable people we work with. The Housing Ombudsman are finding more cases of serious maladministration and awarding higher sums of compensation, which leads to reputational damage and financial detriment for the organisation receiving the Order. PST0026 Cheesbrough, Heather	Significant increase in Planning Appeals and JRs , in particular public enquiries and hearings, these have considerable costs that are unbudgeted for within the service. In some instances the LPA may have to pay appellants costs and with JRs legal costs are always generated. Planning has become increasingly litigious and recent changes by central government through LURA and significant member and resident interest in planning decisions coupled with a requirement to meet the housing target, and in particular the small sites target, has made decision making much more contentious and adversarial. VRN0056 Aspinall, Kristian	A complaint is made to DCMS regarding the consultation process for the Croydon Libraries Review which is upheld. This would prevent any changes to the Library service model, which would mean the current service which is not fit for purpose continues to operate. This would have a financial and reputational impact to the council, and prevent the improvements needed to the service.	Costs for legal advice, and if upheld, fines from failure for delivering statutory library services which are "comprehensive & efficient". Failure to implement a new model would stop the investment planned for the service by shifting resources from buildings to staffing and opening hours. Failure to change would prevent us improving the stability of current service, including the frequent closure of buildings due to staff absence.
